MAC EWAN NAMES HEALTH LECTURE THEATRE AFTER LOCAL PHILANTHROPISTS

Edmonton – Grant MacEwan College is proud to recognize the contributions made to MacEwan by Drs. Peter and Doris Kule. MacEwan will name the large lecture theatre in the Robbins Health Learning Centre the Drs. Peter and Doris Kule Health Lecture Theatre.

Drs. Peter and Doris Kule recently announced a $1,050,000 commitment to MacEwan of which $300,000 supports a new Chair in International Health and $750,000 supports a new endowment in nursing and health technology at MacEwan. The Kules are committed to the long term sustainability that philanthropy can provide to areas of international health and health technology. This will ensure that the Robbins Health Learning Centre remains a state of the art learning facility, and that students in the health professions will benefit from a global perspective on health care.

“The Kules commitment to MacEwan ensures that our students utilize the latest technology to prepare for their careers in the health sector,” said Paul Byrne, President and CEO of MacEwan. “The entire college community benefits because of their generous commitment to MacEwan.”
