Clark Builders selected to build new Centre for Arts and Culture

Edmonton - The Board of Governors at MacEwan University has selected Clark Builders of Edmonton to build the new Centre for the Arts and Culture at the City Centre Campus. Clark Builders is recognized as a leading construction management firm in western Canada and has worked with the university before, most recently on its University Service Centre.

“After reviewing several proposals the university agreed that Clark Builders would be the best fit to construct this important new building,” said David Atkinson, president, MacEwan University.

The new Centre for Arts and Culture will house all the programs currently housed at its west-end campus, which include programs in the visual, performing and communication arts. Additional space will also be available for future growth and other programs. The new building will be located beside the Robbins Health Learning Centre. Construction will begin in early November and it is expected to be completed for September 2017.

Founded in 1971, MacEwan University inspires its students with a powerful combination of academic excellence and personal learning experiences. Offering more than 65 programs including undergraduate degrees, applied degrees, diplomas, certificates, continuing education and corporate training, the university provides a transformative education in a creative, collaborative and supportive learning environment where creativity and innovation thrive. Located in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, MacEwan University offers a unique student experience that opens up diverse pathways for achievement and growth.
