February 18, 2016

Centre for Arts and Culture one step closer to completion

Edmonton—MacEwan University is pleased to announce that the new Centre for Arts and Culture is one step closer to completion. One of the two cranes currently used in the construction process will be removed on Tuesday, February 23. When the facility is completed in the fall of 2017 it will house all the current programming available at the west-end campus.

“Moving west-end operations to the City Centre Campus means a richer academic experience for our students giving them easy access to a broader range of course offerings,” said Stuart MacLean, vice-president, facilities. “Students will also have access to the full complement of student services, varsity athletics, student clubs and extracurricular activities at the City Centre Campus,” added MacLean.

The Centre for Arts and Culture is first and foremost a teaching facility that will provide state-of-the-art technology, classroom and performance space that is important to the educational experience of students. It features cutting edge architecture that employs a brilliant use of space for performance, practice, study, and classroom teaching. It will also be a wonderful venue for student performances, alumni events and other university functions.

“Being downtown means our fine and performing arts students will have greater access to the arts district,” added MacLean. “This will give programs, students and graduates a greater profile in the arts community as well as enlivening the street, day and night in downtown Edmonton,” said MacLean.

Founded in 1971, MacEwan University inspires its students with a powerful combination of academic excellence and personal learning experiences. Offering more than 65 programs including undergraduate degrees, applied degrees, diplomas, certificates, continuing education and corporate training, the university provides a transformative education in a creative, collaborative and supportive learning environment where creativity and innovation thrive. Located in Edmonton, Alberta Canada, MacEwan University offers a unique student experience that opens up diverse pathways for achievement and growth.