They’re back: students move into MacEwan University residence

Edmonton – It’s a sure sign that summer vacation is over as almost 900 students move into the MacEwan University Student Residence before they begin classes in September. Many of the students will be moving away from home for the first time and many are coming from smaller communities across Alberta and Canada.

As this time of year can be emotional for students and parents, the university works to ensure that the transition is as comfortable as possible, and focuses on creating a positive student experience.

The MacEwan Student Residence features a variety of living options for students, including one-bedroom, two-bedroom and quad units.
