MacEwan University’s Strategic Internationalization Plan

Vision: To become a university of global significance, relevance and value.

Goal: To foster a culture of internationalization that creates global citizens.

Rationale: MacEwan University is in the heart of Edmonton—one of the most rapidly growing and ethnically diverse cities in North America. As such, internationalization and the global mindset that goes along with it are essential to developing our university into a place that understands, values, and promotes diversity within our city and the world around us. We must both embrace the world as it comes to us and go out into the world to experience and benefit from the richness of the knowledge, culture, and intelligence that surrounds us.

Definition: Key elements of internationalization of higher education include global perspectives, intercultural awareness, and the development of a mindset where people view themselves as locally embedded global citizens. A recent European Parliament study provides a useful definition of the internationalization of higher education as “the intentional process of integrating an international, intercultural or global dimension into the purpose, functions and delivery of post-secondary education, in order to enhance the quality of education and research for all students and staff, and to make a meaningful contribution to society.”

Internationalization does not occur by chance; it is intentional and requires the energy and resources of all stakeholder groups within the university community.

“Global is hard work. It involves lots of discussions that do not bear fruit, lots of visits that lead to nothing, and probably a certain amount of internal resistance. But it’s a great calling. It links education to the world we live in, and that our students will live in. It provides exciting vistas for faculty and staff... It pushes the institution to greater contemporary relevance. It awakens students, not just the top group that will receive Fulbright grants or other honors, but a larger segment that will find in global study a sense of purpose, an escape from parochialism, and—I know this is over-used—a transformational experience.”

MacEwan’s internationalization plan focuses on building the capacity to create an academic environment that prepares students, faculty, and staff to succeed in diverse contexts and make sense of today’s world. It provides a comprehensive and relevant framework for the MacEwan community to progress along the spectrum from multicultural to intercultural and from tolerance of diversity to active engagement with it.

Internationalization has a greater chance of success with an integrated, purposeful, long-term approach. This strategy takes into account global and local realities, addresses employers’ needs for graduates with a global mindset, and provides students, faculty, and staff with valuable internationalization opportunities at home and abroad. It aligns with MacEwan’s Integrated Strategic Plan, provincial and national internationalization strategies, and is intended as a working document with the flexibility to respond to new opportunities and changes in resource levels.

The MacEwan Committee on Internationalization acts as an advisory body to MacEwan International and the various areas of the university responsible for the organization and successful implementation of the strategic internationalization plan. The committee supports this plan and endorses its goals and actions. MacEwan International will take a lead role in implementing internationalization initiatives along with faculty, staff, and students.
